“Unexplored impacts of EBT Technology in SNAP: Retailers’ Program Participation and the Resulting Impact on SNAP Accessibility” (Job Market Paper)

“Parental Gender Norms and College Major Choices”, with Chulhee Lee and Hyewon Kim. Under Review.

Work in Progress

“Effects of a Welfare Time Limit on Welfare Use and Labor Market Outcomes: Evidence from Florida and Connecticut’s Waiver Experiments”

- This paper shows that the time limit policy does not affect the welfare use of single mothers who participated in Connecticut’s Jobs First Program, contrary to findings from previous studies. I provide suggestive evidence that this difference could be driven by the unusually generous earned income disregard policy of Connecticut.
- The results show that the time limit policy is context-dependent and thus should be understood in the context of other policies.
